This section begins with copies of letters two of Franklin's friends write to him when he's living in Paris after the American Revolution (the Revolution is what made Franklin take a break after writing Part 1). The first, short letter is from Abel James. James is really pleased that he had the good luck to read Part 1 of Franklin's autobiography.

The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin Part 2 | Shmoop

Meursault, Raymond, and Marie arrive at Raymond's friend's wooden bungalow. Masson, Raymond's friend, has a plump wife with a Parisian accent who bonds with Marie. Seeing the two women laugh, for the first time Meursault really thinks about the fact that he is getting married. Masson, Meursault, and Marie go for a swim down at the beach.
